The material herein was recorded in interviews of Ignacio V. Ponseti, M.D. by Charles E. Hawtrey M.D. between October 2000 and February 2002.

I have been deeply blessed by the confidence placed in me by Ignacio Ponseti and Helen Ponseti-Percas, who have allowed me precious time to interview with them. They have read, re-read, commented, and listened to me as the memoir has evolved. Many physicians including Drs. Reginald Cooper, Joseph Buckwalter, Stewart Weinstein, Richard Brand, Dennis Collis, Barry Friedman, and Moises Broggi have contributed unique personal views of Dr. Ponseti, which bring independent clarity to the narrative. Each person has his or her own understanding of Dr. Ponseti as an individual, mentor, colleague, and friend.

Perhaps one of the most valuable commentators, refining editors, and friendly consultants has been Dr. Laura Julier, Associate Professor in the Department of Writing, Rhetoric, and American Cultures at Michigan State University. Time and again, she read, re-read, and edited the manuscript, making sage statements about how to organize the material from interviews to chapters. She carefully reviewed it, provided extensive revisions and rewriting of passages, and has given me invaluable help. I owe her special and appreciative thanks for this editorial work.

I am indebted to Joyce Roller who has made arrangements finding time for me to interview Dr. Ponseti and finding detailed information in the Department of Orthopedics when I needed it. Dr. Victoria Leonard, resident in Urology, assisted by translating my English letters into Spanish, and translated responses so that they could be incorporated into the narrative. Mrs. Kris Greiner, Editorial Assistant in Urology, has been most helpful in collecting the medical documentation, which illustrates the medical aspects of the story. She also carefully read and helped edit these materials. The Department of Urology and my dear wife, Jo Ann, have graciously given me time to make this history possible. There have been many residents and orthopedic staff who have encouraged and looked forward to the publication of the memoir. To all these many individuals I give collective thanks.
